“A very readable, and—would you believe it—extremely enjoyable introduction to literary theory. This book presents complex thoughts in easily graspable and quite memorable sentences. Guaranteed to appeal to anyone who loves to juggle with concepts and ideas.”

- Monika Fludernik, Professor of English, University of Freiburg, author of Introduction to Narratology and The Fictions of Language and the Languages of Fiction.

“Is this book serious? Or a parody? (A parody of literary theory, or a parody of Idiot’s Guides?) Before getting past the cover, you’re already in the world of literary theory and the questions it asks. Never more serious than when cracking a joke, Venturino banishes dullness and gets to the point of literary theory, which has always been to spark the delight of understanding.”

- Haun Saussy, University Professor, Department of Comparative Literature, University of Chicago, author of The Problem of a Chinese Aesthetic and editor of Ferdinand de Saussure's Course in General Linguistics.

“Who would have thought that this otherwise forbidding field of study could be presented in such a clear-sighted and above all entertaining manner? I even purchased additional copies for my writing staff. Saturday morning cartoons may never be the same.”

- Duane Capizzi, Writer/Producer of Transformers Prime and Superman: Doomsday.
